TRADITIONAL FOOD FOR MODERN TIMES

With over 50 years experience producing high quality branded foods, the family owned Ferrer business began its journey in 1964 in Sant Llorenç de Morunys, in the foothills of the Spanish Pyrenees, with the collection and distribution of truffles and wild mushrooms.

In the mid-1980s, the steady growth of the company and the need for more space in the production facility saw the headquarters move to Santpader (close to Barcelona) and the opening of a new production plant in Moreleja (in the south west of Spain).

By 1995 new product ranges such as sauces and various vegetable preserves were introduced. Since then, Ferrer has been consistently expanding its range with new product lines: broths, soups.

Nowadays, Ferrer is one of the national market leaders in its sector and stands out for the high quality of its products, for the tradition of its recipes, for its Mediterranean roots and for its constant search for innovation.

Ferrer is committed to adapting to new trends and the needs of consumers by providing convenience and naturalness, while keeping the quality and flavours of the most traditional and homemade recipes.

Spanish Romesco Sauce
(Red Pepper and Almond Sauce)

Many people call Romesco sauce "Spanish ketchup".

This sauce is a wonderful accompaniment for grilled vegetables, chicken or fish. It also makes a great sandwich spread.

The origin of the Romesco sauce was in the early 20th century in the boats of the fishing neighborhood of Serrallo (Tarragona). This thick sauce of seafaring origin has today become an internationally known sauce.
